7. Library

ICWA Library has digitized its entire catalogue of books, journals, UN & EU documents, installed RFID gates to secure these resources, installed modern inventory management systems to carry out stock verification of the library regularly. The collection is now accessible through the ICWA website and searchable through the Online Public Access Catalogue system. The library team is digitizing its valuable collection of rare books, bound newspapers and press clippings (this process will help in systematizing and preserving its rich and unique resource in the field of international affairs, while making them easily available for researchers and experts in the field of world affairs in India and abroad). The content pages of all issues of India Quarterly (1945-2008) has been digitized which can now be browsed on the web site.

The Library membership is 1001 and growing. Its revenue has reached Rs.12,16,700/- at the end of financial year 2010-11. The library atmosphere is comfortable and conducive to learning. Sapru House library is a member of reputed professional bodies like, IFLA, DELNET, IASLIC. These memberships are optimally used to seek information or borrow material for our Research and students. Our library collection is visible on the DELNET's union catalogue. The collection is being strengthened with new books and subscription to electronic journals. A collection of books named Heritage of Diplomacy written by our diplomats is being created in the Library. New books are listed on ICWA we-site. We will be circulating the information about the modernization of ICWA library to Indian and foreign universities and institutions.

The growing popularity of ICWA library is reflected in its increasing membership, usages and references.

We are also upgrading skills of our library personnel. They are regularly sent for intensive training and conferences to keep them abreast with the latest trends and technology, using computers. New signage in the stack hall and in the library help the reader locate books quickly.
